Coneral Washington.

To the Editors of the Ecening Post? A correspondent recently inquired about the revolutionary song concerning General Washington, 1 often heard my father and grandather sing it together, and though disremember the whole I will have my greadfather copy it out and send it. It was begun:

When Congress sent old Washington,
All clothed in power and breeches,
To meet old Britain's war-worn sons
And make some renei speeches,
'Twas then he took his gloomy way,
Bestride his mangy donkeys,
And travelled well both night and day
Until he reached the Yankees.

"Away from camp. bont three miles off,
From Haunah he dismounted;
His sergeant brushed his sun-burned wig
While he the specie counted.
All prinked up in field bag-wig.
The haking notwithstanding.
In breeches tight, oh, glorious sight!
He reached the Yankee landing.

* The women ran, the darkies too,
And all the bells they toll-ed.
For Biltain's boys, by Doodle-doo,
Were sure to be consol-ed.
Most every child went into camp,
All deressed in homespun kersely.
To see the greatest reberscamp
As ever crossed o'er Jersey.

"The rebel clowns, oh, what a sight? The rebel clowns, oh, what a sufficient year was their figure;
Yonder there stood a pious wight,
And here and there a nigger.
Upon a stumn he placed himself,
Great Washington did he. And through the nose of Lawyer Close Proclaimed great Liberty.

 Old mother Hancock, with a pau All crowded full of butter, Unto the lovely Pabius ran, And added to the spintter."

The last part of this verse is too bad for publishing, and I don't remember any more than the half-verse you published last week. I know another song about the Revolution, if you want it. It is about General Clinton. J. J. BIRD.

Eighty-two years old, and grandson of Marious Willetts.

Through the light long summer day
Sem the game of Draw did play.
Through the summer Sammy laughed,
Sang and playe i the game of Draft.
Gay and j.4ly and screne—
With his breeches of nankeen. Through the doleful winter days

Through the dolerni winter as Silil at poker Sammy plays.
Gone his songs and annies so bland,
He is waiting for a hand—
And the winter skies are chil.
And he wears that nankeen still.
MORAL. Praft and naukeen go tor ther Very weil in summer weather, But when winter time sets in

But when ankeen get too thin. George Francis Train is decidedly same upon some points. In regard to newspaper articles, for instance, he says: "Epigeam only wins. Long stories tire the listener. We are introducing a new style of dicreture. Nothing over four inches is admitted. Long-winded articles go overboard. Your shot-gun only kills your woodcock a few yards off; the same lead in rifle-ball knocks a grizzly at a mile."
